Analysis and Comparison

- Puma offers a range of sportswear products at various price points, with discounts and ratings mostly averaging around 4.5.
- Asics products also vary in price, with some higher-priced items like the Gel-Nimbus 27 Wide, but generally competitive with an average rating around 4.5.
- Puma's promotional campaigns focusing on bold strategies and brand collaborations may attract more attention, impacting Nike's market share.
- Asics' emphasis on movement and technology in their campaigns could resonate well with consumers, potentially influencing preferences away from Nike.
- Both Puma and Asics are actively refining their strategies to enhance competitiveness, which could challenge Nike's dominance in the sportswear market.

By closely monitoring the pricing, discounts, and ratings of Puma and Asics, Nike can assess potential impacts on its market positioning and adjust its strategies accordingly.
